Honor Roll of Donors
2009

EASTERN
WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY
FOUNDATION
Dear friends,

It is always my honor to share with you the accomplishments of Eastern Washington University. Our donors and friends play an important role in our successes, allowing EWU to continually expand our commitment to student success.

As state support continues to decline during this difficult economic climate, your support is even more critical. This year, especially, I am excited to introduce our Honor Roll of Donors. While each of you may have a different reason for giving, the result is the same – you are supporting a student.

Being on campus every day, I can tell you that supporting our students is a never-ending job, one made even more challenging given the current budget situation. Maintaining a high-quality and affordable academic environment takes creative thinking, dedication and hard work.

While Eastern is proud to have record enrollment, this also means it will take even more of a commitment to make sure we retain these students and see them through until they earn their degrees. I don’t want them worrying about how to pay for school, when their valuable time should be spent concentrating on their studies.

Despite the challenges of today, we’ve had some remarkable donations from generous supporters. One such gift will benefit health science students through five varied scholarships, which are now at the endowment level of $100,000 each thanks to this donation.

Every gift, no matter the amount, is very much appreciated. That is why I am so proud and honored to recognize those who believe in Eastern’s mission.

Our students are a great investment, and I want to personally thank you for joining Nadine and me as donors supporting their dreams. Eastern is proud to provide educational opportunities for many first-generation students, and they will continue to need your help.

Together, we must continue to push forward and continue our efforts to increase support for these deserving students during these difficult times.

Within these pages, Eastern Washington University honors you.

Sincerely,

Rodolfo Arévalo, PhD
President
Eastern Washington University
A Growing Need

To continue our commitment to students, we must overcome the modern realities of higher education. Shrinking budgets, declining state funding and higher tuition are just some of the challenges facing EWU. That’s why support from the corporate and philanthropic foundations and individuals listed on these pages is so critical.

Student Support Never Retires

Karen Schomburg’s top priority has always been giving back to her community. She has participated in Rebuilding Spokane, Habitat for Humanity, First Night Spokane, a health food cooperative, and she was a foster parent.

Now, thanks in great part to the Eastern Washington University Retirees Association (EWURA) Golden Eagle Scholarship, she has started something big at Eastern. Karen’s goal is a degree in interdisciplinary studies with emphasis in social services, government and leadership. After she graduates from EWU, she plans to continue her studies toward priesthood in her church.

“She is a mature, innovative woman with specific ongoing professional goals for herself,” says Sonja Matison, EWURA Golden Eagle Scholarship chair and emeritus professor of social work.

EWURA’s retired faculty and staff have dedicated their lives to EWU and believe education is the way of the future. “Increases in tuition costs make it very difficult, if not impossible, for many deserving students to achieve their educational dreams,” says EWURA President Karen Raver. “It is important the Golden Eagle Scholarship keeps up with rising tuition costs. Consistently awarding one quarter’s tuition, paid out in three installments each academic year, allows students opportunities they might not otherwise have available to them.”

EWURA Secretary-Treasurer Jay Rea knows firsthand what a difference it can make in a student’s life. “My father had two years of college in Illinois until the Depression hit and he had to return home to help my grandfather with his business,” Rea says. “When my family moved to Washington, we had no financial reserves. I was encouraged by my high school chemistry teacher to aim high. I was accepted to Harvard, Yale, Northwestern and Stanford, but only Stanford offered the full ride I needed. I support the Golden Eagle Scholarship Endowment and scholarship because I want to give some very good students an opportunity to achieve their goals.”

The Dream of a Better Life

A frightened 3-year-old girl crouches in the Mexican desert brush. She and her four older siblings watch their mother pray, clutching rosary beads. A helicopter flies overhead.

Their father whispers his promise to never give up on their pursuit of a brighter future in America. When it’s safe, the father gathers his youngest daughter in his arms, and the family runs toward the border.

They settle in central Washington. The girl spends summers picking crops with her family, but she reaches for a better life.

“My dream is to pursue college, develop my potential and help my family,” says Elena Calderon, now an EWU sophomore. “I will become a teacher who inspires students to achieve their highest potential and shows them the path toward college.”

Money was the only barrier in Elena’s path, but she earned scholarships by successfully juggling a high GPA in high school, running Start college courses, ASB presidency, cheerleading and sports.

Elena is able to attend EWU, thanks to generous donors like JoAnne and John McKay. In addition to their gifts to EWU Foundation, the McKays contributed to a scholarship that is available at EWU via the Washington State Achievers Scholarship Program. Elena earned that scholarship and others.

In a tearful embrace, Elena and JoAnne met at the annual Pass Through the Pillars celebration as Elena began her EWU journey with a walk up the pathway to Showalter Hall. Through a flood of happy tears, Elena exclaimed how grateful she and her parents are for the miracle of JoAnne’s life-changing gifts.

“My husband and I are thrilled that we have the opportunity to help a student like Elena,” JoAnne says. “She has overcome many obstacles in her young life and will undoubtedly achieve great things in the future.”

Dan Fisher and Jean Swartz
It Feels So Good to Give
Dan Fisher can speak of Enterobacteriaceae, bioinformatics and electrophoresis in one sentence, and then tell you about playing guitar, spoons and didgeridoo in the next. This EWU graduate student’s passion for biology and street music are already helping people.

In an EWU science lab, Dan conducts research on genes that provide drug resistance in the family of bacteria often implicated in infections. And in a classroom, he teaches undergraduate microbiology.

After he graduates with a master’s in biology, Dan’s professional goals involve research for new applications of biotechnology, industrial applications of microbiology and food microbiology. Those areas of research are vital to ensure availability of safe, healthful and sustainable foods for the world’s growing populations.

Locally, Dan’s musical gifts help feed families. “Although my research and lab work is time consuming,” he says, “I find time to play numerous instruments. I participate in Spokane’s annual Street Music Week, in which local musicians play to raise funds for Second Harvest Food Bank.”

Dan’s current and future contributions to the world are possible because William J. Sutton Society and Legacy Society donors Jean Swartz and her late husband, Herman, established the J. Herman and Jean Swartz Biotechnology Scholarship.

“The scholarship was Herm’s idea,” Jean says. “He had a $400 scholarship when he went to school, so he knew how important scholarships are for students. And I like someone else to have what I didn’t have; I don’t have a college degree.”

Over the years, Jean has talked with her friends about the importance of EWU scholarships for students. Her philanthropy has been contagious. “Some people are encouraged to give because I do,” she says. “To me, that’s a nice compliment. And you know, giving just makes you feel so good, doesn’t it?”
