Honor Roll of Donors
Dear Friends,

It’s been an incredible year for Eastern Washington University and I am honored to thank you for your part in helping Eastern reach new heights. In this time of economic downturn and tightening state budgets, it is easy to focus on the many challenges we face. But, in these Honor Roll pages, I am pleased to focus on you – our generous donors who have made so many things possible for our students in the past year.

Your donations made our unique red turf a reality and propelled our Eagles football team to a first-ever national championship. The successes continued in the classroom as well, with EWU winning its first-ever Big Sky Conference President’s Cup, which recognizes the academic achievement of all our student-athletes.

EWU has celebrated many student, faculty and university successes over the past year – including a record student body (10,750) and a record number of National Science Foundation grants (five), secured by our faculty.

Our students and our faculty are excelling and we couldn’t do it without you. Every dollar you give helps us maintain our commitment to student success, and that support has never been more crucial.

In these pages, you will see how drastically state support has declined, while at the same time, tuition has increased. Maintaining a high-quality and affordable academic environment will continue to take creative thinking, dedication and hard work, by us all.

I don’t want students to just be able to attend Eastern; I want to ensure they graduate from Eastern. I am honored to recognize those who share in this important mission by investing in our students.

With gratitude,

Rodolfo Arévalo, PhD
President
A Growing Need

To continue our commitment to students, we must overcome the modern realities of higher education. Shrinking budgets, declining state funding and higher tuition are just some of the challenges facing EWU. That’s why support from the corporate and philanthropic foundations and individuals listed on these pages is so critical.

An Everlasting Impact on EWU, Its Students and Our Society

The young assistant professor of psychology sat in a solid oak chair at one of the many large, matching tables in the room, masterfully writing his next lecture. Towering, arching windows allowed sunlight to illuminate several books and journals sprawled across his table.

In the quiet Hargreaves Library, Walter Powers could prepare his lectures, surrounded by an abundance of information. If he needed a Sigmund Freud book, however, he would have to check it out from the librarian, who kept Freud’s books in a filing cabinet by his desk. That is, until Walt convinced him that his psychology students were mature enough to have access to Freud’s books in the stacks.

Much has changed since 1954, when Walt began teaching at Eastern. JFK Library opened in ’67, and Hargreaves Hall was remodeled, lowering the second-floor reading room’s ceiling to make room for a third floor. In 2009, a remodeling and restoration project, which included reclaiming the reading room’s stately high ceiling and two-story windows, was complete.

One thing hasn’t changed: Walt, who retired from EWU in 1993, and his wife Myrtle, a long-time teacher in Cheney, have continued to contribute to student success. Their meaningful gifts to EWU have varied in form, scope and purpose. They have supported several scholarships, they donated Norman Rockwell lithographs from their collection, and a charitable gift annuity benefits the Walter Powers Scholarship Endowment and the EWU Library Collection Endowment.

In acknowledgement of their generosity, the Hargreaves reading room, where Walt spent countless hours of his early years at Eastern, will be renamed “The Walter and Myrtle Powers Reading Room.”

The Powers’ passion for supporting EWU scholarships is directly tied to Walt’s experience as a professor. “It has been most gratifying over the years to spend time with the students who I have had the opportunity to help grow into mature professional school and mental health counselors,” he says. “Most important is to know that my contribution had a multiplier effect, as they have gone on to help hundreds of others. Scholarships are extremely important to encourage students to excel in their chosen fields of study. Many of my students are the first in their families to attend college. Scholarships provide encouragement for them to know that others care.”

In turn, Walt encourages his former students to give back to Eastern. “Your contribution can be measured in dollars,” he tells alumni, “but far more important is the everlasting impact your contribution will have on the future of EWU, its students, and ultimately, our society.”
A Team of Champions Start Something Big

"Would you ever have thought five years ago that you and I would be on the field after a national championship win?" teary-eyed defensive lineman Tyler Jolley said as he bear-hugged his high school football coach. EWU Eagles had just won the national championship in Frisco, Texas.

That emotional moment last January was put into play 44 years ago.

After graduating from Spokane’s Shadle Park High School in 1967, football player Ed Fisher enrolled at Eastern to reach his goal of becoming a coach and teacher. The Eastern student-athlete set school and conference records as punter and defensive back on the football team and long jumper in track and field. His freshman year, Eastern advanced to the NAIA Football Championship game. He competed four times in the NAIA Track and Field Championships.

Ed’s degree in physical education and minor in biology led to a legendary career that included 23 years as football coach, and biology and PE teacher at South Kitsap High School in Port Orchard, Wash. Ed’s teams won a state championship and 14 league titles.

His current job as executive director of the National Athletic Equipment Reconditioning Association keeps him busy most of the year, but each autumn, he’s an assistant football coach for his son, East Valley High School Football Coach Adam Fisher.

You see, along the way, Adam played quarterback for his dad’s team. Then, thanks to the generosity of alumni and other supporters of Eastern athletics, he received a scholarship to play football at EWU and to follow in his dad’s footsteps as a football coach and teacher. He graduated in ’99, settled down in Spokane with his wife Jolene ’99, and was hired to coach football at East Valley.

One of Adam’s standout players was Tyler Jolley. When it came time to choose a college, Tyler’s parents hoped he would play football nearby so that they could attend his games. In his junior year, he accepted the first offer to come his way: a full-ride scholarship at EWU.

“The scholarship was extremely important,” Tyler says. “I’m the last of nine kids, on my dad’s single income, so without it, I may not have attended college.”

Tyler is about to earn a degree in interdisciplinary studies, with minors in business and communications. “Ed and Adam pushed me all three years I played football at East Valley, and they reminded me to keep my education first,” Tyler says. “Football would be the fun part.”

As Tyler was growing as a football player at East Valley and EWU, Ed, Adam and Jolene were donating to their alma mater’s academic and athletic programs.

“I was given an opportunity,” Adam says. “An athletic scholarship and more. Athletics come to an end; you have to get an education to get you through. Whether they’re athletes or not, some students need help. It’s our responsibility to give to the next group that comes after us.”

“The individuals who taught and coached me at Eastern changed my life,” Ed says. “Their professionalism and integrity made them role models for me. It’s important to me to give back so that today’s kids can share my experiences at Eastern. If you give one student the opportunity to become what they’re capable of, you give them the opportunity to be their best, to succeed, and to give back.”

When EWU alumnus and Tennessee Titans All-Pro offensive tackle Michael Roos ’05 and his wife Katherine ’04 gave back with a $500,000 gift to launch the red turf project, many alumni like Ed stepped up with donations to ensure the $1 million project was completed before the magical 2010 season kicked off.

“No question the red turf was a major portion of the team’s success,” Ed says. “Our athletes and coaches deserve the artificial surface to do their best.”

Tyler agrees. “What made the difference for us was a quality surface to play and practice on without it turning into a mud bowl. Without the new turf, we wouldn’t be national football champions. All season we did our best to represent those donors. We’re all champions now – not just the team but the whole university.”

Tyler’s future is full of opportunities, thanks to the Roos and Fisher families, and all donors like them who contributed to Tyler’s success and the championship season. “I want to keep playing football, but if that doesn’t work out, I hope to become a firefighter,” he says. “Whatever I do next, I can’t wait to start my career and give back to Eastern!”
