Electronic Resources Use Guidelines

Eastern Washington University Libraries have guidelines for the use of full text electronic resources. Unlike books, most electronic resources (i.e., EBSCOhost, FirstSearch, ProQuest, and JSTOR) are licensed, not owned, by the library. Publishers and producers of full text electronic resources put restrictions on their use. In general, these restrictions include:

Authorized users:
- Currently enrolled students, faculty, staff and walk-in library patrons
- Office-campus/remote use is available for many electronic resources to EWU faculty, staff and currently enrolled students who use the Libraries proxy server
- Off-campus access is not available to users who are not in the above category, including those with courtesy cards

Permitted use:
- Teaching and Learning
- Scholarly
- Research (non-commercial)

Copyright Law
- Provisions of Copyright Law, Title 17, See http://www.copyright.gov/title17/

Prohibited use:
- Commercial use
- Systematic downloading or copying
- Use in course packs without appropriate publisher’s permission
- Removing or altering copyright notices
- Additional restrictions on specific licenses may apply. Look at terms of use for other limits on any database.

Misuse or violation of a license agreement may result in the termination of access to a full text electronic resource for the entire Eastern Washington University campus community.

Persons who violate the allowable use of a licensed database may lose library privileges.

For questions about license agreements for specific resources, please contact Sue Anderson at sanderson@ewu.edu or (509) 359-7032.

Revised September 21, 2005